The choice restaurant st louis menu

Help us ensure everyone in St. Louis has the opportunity to live longer, healthier lives. A restaurant menu is more than just a list of food with prices. It's a reflection of a restaurant's style and concept. As such, it's an important marketing tool and each element of its design should be carefully considered. A good rule of thumb is to keep these short and simple. But the best descriptions of food are vivid and enticing enough to make a guest's mouth water. In any case, make sure the description reveals the major ingredients in the dish. Use the proper ethnic names to add a bit of authentic flair, but don't leave your guests wondering what's in baba ghanoush. Descriptions on your menu should be interesting without being too complicated to understand. A restaurant menu design and layout should be compatible with the restaurant itself. This is a matter of your choice of font, color scheme, and illustrations. They can be formal, casual, or playful, whatever matches your restaurant concept, location or theme. If you are opening a casual Mexican restaurant, vibrant colors such as red, turquoise, purple, and green can be used. The same colors would look out of place on the menu of a French bistro or a fine Italian restaurant. A French bistro menu may have a classic script font or a simple plain one, while a sports bar might use a bolder font. In any case, beware of choosing a font or type size that is hard to read or too small. Working out your ingredient costs and portion sizes are critical to pricing each menu item correctly. Your overall business costs are important, too. The price of a salad can be very different at a fast-casual restaurant and a fine dining place, for good reasons related to costs. You also must familiarize yourself with your competition's pricing. You don't have to undercut everybody else, but you can't price too far above them, either. Certain occasions such as holidays or local festivals are a good time to put together a specialty menu. Mother's Day is a prime example. Specialty menus and prix fixe menus allow you to expand your regular dining selection and even learn what works and what doesn't. Consumers consistently cite healthy menu options as an influence in their decisions on where to eat. Consider adding a selection of low-fat, low-calorie options, and some vegetarian if not vegan dishes. You might also offer a smaller portion size of some dishes, at smaller prices. St. Matthews in Louisville, Kentucky is full of interesting and delicious dining choices. The restaurants on this list are a variety of choices and offer some of the best food in the city of Louisville. 01 of 07 Charles Groux / Getty Images While there are a few Havana Rumbas in town, the first was opened in 2004 in the heart of St. Matthews. It started small and slowly expanded, all the while serving up delicious Cuban cuisine. Dine on salads, seafood, Cuban sandwiches, and an assortment of entrees. It's a fun place with lively music, friendly staff, and they do a bustling business. 02 of 07 Courtesy of P.F. Chang's China Bistro P.F. Chang's is an upscale Chinese restaurant with classy décor and service, which is amplified by the fantastic menu of flavorful Chinese dishes prepared with high-quality ingredients. If you didn't know it before eating at P.F. Chang's, you'd probably never guess that it was a chain restaurant. In fact, everything from the white stallions that stand at opposite sides of the restaurant's entrance to the intricately-prepared dishes signals originality and attention to detail. 03 of 07 Courtesy of Ruth's Chris Steak House Address 6100 Dutchmans Ln Kaden, Tower - 16th Floor, Louisville, KY 40205, USA Phone +1 502-479-0026 Ruth's Chris is a fine dining establishment specializing in steaks and seafood. One of the best features of the Louisville Ruth's Chris Steakhouse is its placement at the top of the Kaden Tower. Diners not only indulge in amazing food, but they also get to enjoy an amazing view of Louisville's East End. The prices are high, but the quality of the food is completely worth the cost. 04 of 07 Courtesy of Napa River Grill Napa River Grill is unique in the Louisville area in serving Northern California/Pacific Rim fusion cuisine. One of the biggest attractions of Napa River Grill is its seasonal menu that features fresh fish, steaks, pasta, and salad. In the warmer seasons, Napa River Grill is a fabulous place to eat because it has one of the best outdoor dining areas in the entire city. Continue to 5 of 7 below. 05 of 07 Courtesy of FABD Smokehouse This is on the edge of St. Matthews, in the Crescent Hill neighborhood, and while it's not on our list of top 10 Frankfort Ave. Restaurants, it probably should be. If you've driven past Frankfort Avenue Beer Depot, chances are you've smelled barbecue smoke in the air. There are two large smokers outside of the establishment using low-and-slow smoke methods in order to serve up some of the best meat in town. Known for their ribs and brisket, they also have hamburgers on the menu, too. The restaurant itself is very casual with a tavern vibe and while families are welcomed there are plenty of people there having a cold beer or sipping on a glass of bourbon. There are even a couple of games in the back (corn hole and a bit of golf putting) if you like to keep busy before your meal. 06 of 07 Courtesy of Silvio's Italian Restaurant A family-owned restaurant, Silvio's, is a welcoming space serving up Italian American cuisine. For a starter, their rice balls are a favorite, three rice balls filled with mozzarella balls and served with a marinara sauce to top. For your entree, choose from Veal Parmesan, Chicken Parmesan, various pasta dishes, and more. The staff is very attentive and don't be surprised if the owner himself stops by your table to sure you are enjoying your meal. 07 of 07 Courtesy of Guaca Mole Cocina Mexicana This restaurant is technically in Lyndon, a suburb in Louisville's East End past St. Matthews, but if you are in the area and in the mood for Mexican food, it's worth the drive. There are a few varieties of guacamole on the menu. Typically a traditional option made with onions, tomatoes, and cilantro and a sweeter choice featuring roasted poblano peppers, corn, and grilled red onions. Whatever you choose, it is sure to be delicious. Their sister restaurant El Taco Luchador is located in Louisville on Baxter Ave. Courtesy of SWLouis photography by Scott LouisYou've all heard of it. And if you've been to St. Louis, you've probably waited in line to try it. The barbecue scene across Missouri -- namely in St. Louis and Kansas City -- is a force, and Pappy's Smokehouse is a major player, selling around 6,000lbs of ribs per day. Go early, get the ribs, and be prepared for a wait. (And if you don't go early, be prepared to wait an entire day, as they close when they run out of meat.) Pappy's draws crowds from across the country, and will continue to do so with its Memphis-style, sauce-less meat (its juices alone will suffice), distinct fruit wood smoke, and hog-whispering tendencies. When you want to celebrate a night out with your special someone, St. Louis may be one of the most romantic options in the whole Midwest. After watching the sunset from the iconic Gateway Arch, head to dinner at one of the city's many intimate spots for sharing a meal. The region is an agricultural powerhouse of the country, and you can see that influence in the many restaurants which offer seasonal menus and farm-to-table specialties. Your options range from cozy and down-to-earth bistros to elegant Italian fine-dining in The Hill neighborhood, plus everything in between. 01 of 10 Courtesy of Sidney Street Café The Sidney Street Café is located in a century-old building in the Benton Park neighborhood south of downtown St. Louis. The dim lighting, brick walls, and dark hardwood floors give it the intimate ambiance that you look for in a romantic setting. Just outside the restaurant are over 100 yards of raised garden beds producing different fruits, vegetables, and herbs that eventually end up on your plate, so the menu is constantly evolving depending on what's in season. The menu is a fusion of flavors, mixing the chef's Spanish heritage, French training, and love for Southern ingredients to create dishes that are always delicious. Enjoy a cocktail or glass of wine at the antique bar with your date before your meal. 02 of 10 Courtesy of Trattoria Marcella Nothing says romance like Italian food, and Trattoria Marcella is always at the top of local "best restaurant" lists in St. Louis. This South City favorite features fine Italian food like house-made ravioli, creamy risotto, and osso bucco over a bed of polenta. A bottle of Tuscan wine to share helps to round out the meal. The service is always excellent, and the food never disappoints. On weekdays from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., happy hour at the bar or on the patio includes a discount on drinks and antipasti specials for appetizers and other small bites. 03 of 10 Courtesy of Bailey's Chocolate Bar Bailey's Chocolate Bar in Lafayette Square has a decadent feel to it. From the moment you enter, you see rich red velvet curtains and inviting plush couches. The food and drinks are just as decadent, if not more. Bailey's is the place to go to indulge, known for its sweet treats and dessert cocktails. The drinks menu includes still and sparkling wine, but the signature cocktails are the true stars and the reason locals return again and again. Ice cream martinis, Mexican hot chocolate with tequila, and coffee liqueurs are just a few examples of the creative ways to imbibe here. Homemade brownies, hazelnut torte, and golden pear galette are all on the dessert food menu, but if you're going on a date, order the Lover's Plate to share. It's a monstrous sampler dish with champagne sorbet, chocolate stout cake, orange-chocolate macaron, maple shortbread, caramel cheesecake, and more. It's the ultimate indulgence, but perfect to share with your special someone. 04 of 10 Courtesy of Dominic's on the Hill St. Louis' The Hill neighborhood, the historically Italian quarter, is full of so many great restaurants that it's hard to pick just one. But if you're looking for a romantic dinner, make a reservation at Dominic's. Dominic's has been a favorite on The Hill since 1971. It serves up gourmet Italian cuisine in an elegant, old-world dining room. The vibe is upscale, and business dress or "tasteful casual attire" is requested. There is also a newer restaurant, Dominic's Trattoria, in Clayton. Continue to 5 of 10 below. 05 of 10 Courtesy of Vin de Set Vin de Set is rooftop dining at its finest. The restaurant, located near downtown St. Louis in quaint Lafayette Square, has a warm and inviting atmosphere with exposed brick walls and high ceilings. The real standout, however, is the rooftop deck with its outdoor ambiance and views of the surrounding city. Vin de Set specializes in French dishes like crab beignets, steak and frites, and a variety of savory crepes. Come out on Sunday mornings for Vin de Set's award-winning brunch, which is almost as famous for its extravagant bloody mary bar as it is for its food. 06 of 10 Courtesy of Russell's on Macklind Russell's is a neighborhood cafe in south St. Louis with upscale food, good wine, and great service. In the evenings, tables are lit by candlelight for an intimate dining experience. Russell's serves hearty American fare like pan-roasted chicken, bacon-wrapped meatloaf, and ricotta "gnudi" dumplings. It's also known for its delicious, hand-crafted desserts and excellent weekend brunch. When the weather permits, the outdoor patio is cozy, inviting, and surrounded by a lush garden that undoubtedly ups the romance of the meal. 07 of 10 Courtesy of Aya Sofia Aya Sofia, named for the famous mosque in Istanbul, is an elegant choice to enjoy Turkish and other Middle Eastern fares without having to leave St. Louis. The restaurant is decorated in rich colors and Ottoman fabrics, giving it a luxurious atmosphere. Start the meal by ordering a variety of hot and cold meze, or small plates, to share, like hummus, baba ghanoush, and borek pies with spinach and feta. All types of typical dishes from the region make up the menu, but beef, lamb, and vegetarian items are the key plates. Turkish food is best-enjoyed family-style, so order a few things to share with your loved one. 08 of 10 Courtesy of Cyrano's Café & Wine Bar Cyrano's Café in Websters Grove is a neighborhood favorite, and the funky interior with its brightly colored rainbow walls makes for a casual setting perfect for a laid-back date. If your sweetheart has a sweet tooth, Cyrano's is the perfect place. Sure, you can get a meal at this Webster Groves cafe from their extensive bistro menu, including fresh salads, hot sandwiches, or hearty entrees, but the real reason to come is for the acclaimed desserts. Massive ice cream sundaes and the famous caramel brioche bread pudding are popular options, but if you're going on a date, nothing is more impressive than one of the fiery flambeés. A waiter will literally ignite your dessert right at the table, flaming your appetite and your desires. Continue to 9 of 10 below. 09 of 10 Courtesy of Tony's Restaurant When you want to impress your date, Tony's in downtown St. Louis is the place to go. Tony's is St. Louis' most celebrated and award-winning restaurant, known for its incredible service, delicious Italian food, and an extensive wine list. Tony's also has an attached locale called Anthony's Bar. The two restaurants share a kitchen, but the menu and ambiance at the bar are much less formal. When you're eating on Tony's side of the restaurant, the dress code is business casual, so make sure to clothe yourself properly. Tony's is an expensive treat but will be a meal you always remember. 10 of 10 Courtesy of The Melting Pot The Melting Pot may be a chain restaurant, but the sensuous experience of dipping foods in melted cheese and chocolate earns it a place as a romantic spot in the area. There are two in the St. Louis suburbs, one in University City and another in Town and Country, both just 20 minutes outside of the city center by car. Being a chain restaurant, the atmosphere is fairly casual and you can dress comfortably. But if you want to make the night extra memorable, dress up and book one of the restaurant's "romance packages" when making your reservation. You can choose to be in a private secluded booth with a bouquet of roses and a bottle of champagne waiting for you at the table, a sure-fire way to leave your special someone astounded.
